The Study Starters Forms

The following pages are filled with many different forms to help you enjoy your studies. This section contains all the different topic reporting forms. From animals to vehicles, you will find many different forms to help you in your studies. These forms are not only useful for unit studies, they can be great supplemental forms for your everyday educational plans, or to help a child get their thoughts together for writing reports or creating projects.

Each page has blanks to fill in about the topic. It might be a time period that their subject was originated in, or information about an individual or a style of art or music. It might have room for scientific information, such as chemical makeup or Latin names for classification. It might have a box for diagramming or drawing a picture of an individual. You can also supply your students with pictures from a clip art disk, magazine or website to cut and paste in the areas. Some forms have areas for opinions and reviews, and others have areas for interesting facts and tidbits of history. Whatever topic you plan, we are certain that there is a Reporting Form to help your student create a study sheet about it.

There is no "right" or "wrong" with these sheets and many are designed to be open-ended so that they will work well with all topics. If you have the printed Study Starters book, you will note that the sheets are single sided on a heavy weight paper for durability and to prevent images from peeking through. If you are copying the forms for your student's use, you might want to copy them as two sided forms for convenience. If you are using the CD, you can print them off your printer either way. Study Starters are truly convenient for you, not the mass market. You select and print them as you need them for your educational plans!
